Evans Resigns Post As School Board Chm.

T. DeWitt Evans, chairman of the Appomattox County School Board for the past twenty years has submitted his resignation because of the "conflict of interest" statute passed by the Virginia Legislature during the 1970 session.

Mr. Evans sent a letter this week to Stuart M. Farrar, chairman of the School Trustee Electoral Board in which he stated: "Dear Mr. Farrar: As you know, my term of office as School Board Member from Southside District, Appomattox County, Virginia expires June 30, 1970. Based upon the recent ruling of the State Attorney General, I will not be eligible for reappointment. I was just informed of this ruling today.

"Your confidence placed in me during my tenure of office is highly appreciated."

According to Farrar, Mr. Evan's ineligibility is the result of the conflict of interest statute passed by the Virginia Legislature during its 1970 session. The effective date is June 26, 1970. The statute says that a school board member's immediate family cannot teach in the same school system.

Mr. Evans was appointed to the school board June 10, 1950 to represent Southside District and was a replacement for Mr. B. G. Anderson who retired from the board at that date. The electoral board noted at the time of the appointment, that Mr. Evans was highly qualified for the position. He was a college graduate, a former teacher and principal, had children in school and was manager of a local bank. He was naturally interested in education.

In announcing Evans' resignation Farrar added, "After twenty years we know that Mr. Evans has been a dedicated, effective and able member of the school board. The electoral board is sorry that he is not eligible for reappointment at this time and we wish to thank him for the many years of service he has given to our county school system."

Farrar has announced that the electoral board will hold a meeting in June, date to be announced, to appoint a replacement for Mr. Evans. "The replacement," he says, "will live in and shall represent Southside District on the school board for the next four years commencing July 1, 1970. The sole responsibility of the school trustee electoral board is to appoint our best qualified person available to the county school board. We think that our present school board is an unusually highly qualified board for a rural county. It is our aim to continue to place highly qualified persons on the school board of Appomattox County. If we desire quality education for our children our school system must be operated and guided by quality school board members, by quality administrators and most important, by quality teachers."

"The selection of a school board member is not a popularity contest," says Farrar," or a friendship deal nor a political payoff. It is the selection of the highest qualified person available who will accept the position, and that is what our board plans to do. For we desire the school children of Appomattox County to a school board and a school system equal to any school board and school system in any other county in Virginia."
